FRIDAY, : NOVEMBER 8, 1878. MR. MORRISON, OF ILLINOIS.

A Springfield dispatch to the Chicago Jour nal, yesterday, announces the defeat of Mr. Morrison, who has represented the seventeenth Illinois district for several terms. Mr. Baker, his opponent, a Republican of high standing, has been elected by a small ma- which sad event occurred at twelve o'clock Mr. Morrison is known with a great deal of regret. One of the most modest, kindliest and honest of our public men, he made an enviable record for devotion to principle consistency in legislation and his fair slayer with his dying breath. The ciple, consistency in legislation and official integrity. Though he did not rank with the first speakers in the house of either party, there was no an inner history yet unwritten, and hid from one superior to him as a worker or counsellor. Prudent he was and safe, and his many gifts as a legislator won for him the recognition of his party as one who, at sometime, will go up higher. His present defeat is, we hope, only temperary. We cannot believe that his fellow-citizens will permit him to retire from public life, or that he himself will willingly remain in enforced idleness. The Democratic party needsiMr. Morrison, and party in Illinois will find employment for the talents he possesses and the experience.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The various courts of the county have been business houses have opened, but the public play in their official capacity the same enterprise which characterizes them as private citizens. A superintendent is to be elected to fill the place made vacant by the death of the lamented J. T. Leath; the public buildings are to be repaired, renovated and fumigated. Indeed, there is much to do before the schools can be opened; yet the board of education has taken no action. The most important of our public institutions should not be the last cared for. A marked feature of the present time is a toud demand for economy in the expenditures of public moneys; but in opening the public schools no additional tax will be imposed, as that has already been fixed. Children are growing up in vice and ignorance for the want of school community has been revived since the epidemic; but there is no greater safeguard to a community, nothing more valuable than pubhe schools. They prevent crime, riots and misrule, and make intelligent, useful citizens.

THE SCEPTER HAS DEPARTED FROM JUDEA.

The fiat has gone forth that New York shall no longer rule the national Democracy. Since the war the Democracy of the empire State has controlled the nomination of the Presidential candidate. The national conventions yielded to the clamors of the New York Democracy and nominated Seymour, Greeley and Tilden. This great State has had more than her share of honor in furnishing candidates for the Presidency, and one thing is certain-New York will not be permitted by the Democratic party to furnish the next candidate for the Presidency. The World understands this fact, and says:

In no part of the south does the old Republican party show any signs of healthy vitality, and though it is possible, of course, that some new organization might develop strength at the south sgainst the Democratic party on new issues, the Republican party, as it existed before 1878, can never regain a foothoid in the south. So long as the Republican party under its old organization remains in the field of pational redirect smith the section of pational redirect safety and the sections will count the section. national representations, and by show serves fit to be trusted. We are opposed to any coalition between the configuration of the situation any coalition between the south and west against the north and east, because such a policy smacks of that sectionalism which every patriot would see eradicated. A candidate for the next Presidency will be nominated by the Democratic convention in the interest of the whole country, and not in tested his innocence. These contrary statewill furnish the candidate in the person of Thurman, or Voorhees, or Hendricks, because the west is entitled to the bonor, and New York has had her share. This may be considered great injustice to Tilden, who, having been defined out of his seat, ought to ing been defined out of his seat, ought to the precedence and the company of the precedence of all speculative investments. UNDERGROUND TELEGRAPH. The city council of Philadelphia have orered the removal of telegraph-poles from the streets of that city, and experiments have been making to produce a wire that could be 1 60 laid underground and worked satisfactorily.

The M'Keesport Times gives an account of 1 00 some interesting experiments made at the tube-works in manufacturing "insulated wire." The wire is now being made in sections of ten feet, but can be made as long as thirteen feet. To make the wire a copper telegraph-wire is inserted in a glass tube of he same length, and sufficiently large to admit the wire easily. The glass tube is then inserted in an iron tube just large enough to admit it. They are all then placed in a furnace and heated to a red heat, and then run brough the rolls, which compress the copper wire, glass and iron tubes all into one mass, but without crushing them. The ends are the convex ends allowing the centers to strike first, thus enabling the electrical connection. The pipe will be enameled before being laid.

A WOMAN'S VENGEANCE.

Details of the Lumberton, N. C., Tragedy-Miss Amelia Linkhaw's Murder of her Alleged Seducer-Denial of his Guilt in an Ante-Mortem Statement.

LUMBERTON, ROBESON CO., N. C., October 29.—The excitement consequent upon the shooting of J. E. Hartman by Miss Amelia Linkhaw, last Thursday, has been increased by the death of the unfortunate young man, ority. This news will be received wherever to-day. The shooting occurred at Rauck's hotel, in this usually quiet village, last Thursday morning about ten o'clock, and the victun lingered in great pain until twelve tofacts in this unfortunate affair, as obtained by a Herald correspondent, are in a degree romantic, but prove conclusively that there is the public by a veil of mystery that may be raised when Amelia Lankhaw is brought to trial for the murder of Hartman, and yet may ever remain in its place and keep the causes which led to the untimely death of the young man, as they now are, shrouded in im-penetrable darkness. The Herald representtive has not been allowed to speak to the fair Amelia on the subject of the homicide. one of her friends will converse on the subect in a manner to shed any light on the afir; and, what seems stranger still, the friends and relatives of Hartman are equally the country needs him, and we trust his reticent. The victim of the homicide was a young man, under thirty years of age, who was reared in this village, and for the last few years has been acting in the capacity of traveling salesman for Messrs. Elhart Wiltz & Co., Baltimore. Hartman's engagement with this house was of such a nature that he traveled for them only at certain times, which opened for the transaction of business; the police have been organized; the usual chime of the church bells are heard, and all our in this place, boarding at the village hotel, the transaction of the church bells are heard, and all our in this place, boarding at the village hotel, the transaction of the church bells are heard, and all our in this place, boarding at the village hotel, the transaction of business; the police have been organized; the usual chime of the church bells are heard, and all our in this place, boarding at the village hotel, the transaction of business; the police have been organized; the usual chime of the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard, and all our in the church bells are heard.

The school board is the accepted lover of Miss Linkhaw, and it composed of our best and most substantial was believed their marriage would in time citizens, and it is to be hoped they will dis- take place, until last summer, for some reason unknown to the public, the engagement was suddenly broken off. Since that time Hartman has been away from Lumberton prosecuting his business as a drummer, and his stay being protracted longer than was ustomary, it was supposed by his friends at he had obtained a permanent situation, and would therefore be in Lumberton hereafter but little of his time. Hartman was an intelligent, well-behaved and popular young man, and was highly espected in this community. Miss Amelia Linkhaw is the daughter of a well-to-do merchant tailor of Lumberton. Her parents are of German descent and have been resilents of the village for a long time. Amelia s their oldest daughter. She is about tweny-two or twenty-three years of age, is of lack eyes. Miss Linkhaw could not well be ermed beautiful, but she is quite a fine looking woman of the brunette order. She is facilities. Everything that is of value to the tolerably well educated, attractive in manof the village, she has always been very popular with all who enjoyed her acquaintance, and she enjoyed an enviable position in society. Nothing had ever been said derogtory to the chastity or good character of he lady until a few months ago she suddenly etired from society, and a short time thereafter it was whispered among the gossip-moners that Amelia Linkhaw was enceinte. This report was not at first believed, but in time proved to be too true. About the twen-ty-third of this month Hartman came to umberton, and took up his old quarters at Rauck's hotel, intending to spend two months there, or until his business should again call him away. His numerous friends and acquaintances gave him an unstinted In last Thursday morning, Miss Linkhaw, closely veiled and wearing a heavy shawl tightly wrapped over her shoulders and around her body, was seen walking rapidly lown the street toward the hotel. She ered the parlor and asked to see Mr. Hartnan. That gentleman, not dreaming what was lurking in the bosom of his visitor, answered promptly to the call. As he entered the room she arose, greeted hein with a smile, spoke to him cordially and extended her left hand. He grasped it firmly, and while they were thus standing face to face, with her right hand she drew a small party under its old organization remains in the field of national politics, politicians will count the south ern States against it at least as decidedly as they have ever counted New England in its favor. In the mean time, changes in the west are drifting that wallom Republican stronghold toward close political union with the south. The congressional delegations of Ohio and Indiana have already undergone a revolution, and even Iowa no longer sends to washington a solid Republican representation. In a word, the Democrates is clearly coming into power in both branches of the next congress, and this result will be due to the alliance of the south with the west. The Democratic center of gravity, which was once supposed to lie in New York, has plainly shifted, and the Democratic Politicians of this State may as well recognize that in t at once, and understand that they are not to dictate the policy of the party any longer. It is becoming a matter of the south will be dead to the sum of five thousand dolderringer pistol from beneath the folds of ter the shooting, arraigned before a judge and bailed in the sum of five thousand dotlars, which was promptly given, for her appearance before a grand jury to answer the Men who have toiled from morning till daughters. The places of dissipation are chiefly supported by those who begin business at nine o'clock and go away at three or four in the afternoon. They have plenty young men are not those who have breakfast early and supper late, and have a pocket case full of the best eigars, and dine at Del monico's, and dress in tip-top fashion, and have their hat set further over on the right exquisite torture fitting the foot, and who have handkerchiefs soaked with musk and patchouly and white rose and new mown hay railways and threatened a great catastro- fever, disease among sheep and small cattle, and balm of a thousand flowers. [Laughter. of that young man who has plenty of money and no occupation. Those are the fortuna oung men who have to work hard for a liv ing. You do not find them in these places of orquity. Give a young man plenty of wine and plenty of cigars, and plenty of fine ses, and Satan has no anxiety about that man's coming out at his place. He ceases to watch him, only giving directions about his ocception when he shall arrive at the end of his journey. [Laughter.] But by that time the clock of old Trinity church was striking one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eigh nine, ten, eleven, twelve-midnight! and with the police and two elders of my churc we sat down at a table in the galleries and looked off upon the vortex of death. The music was in full blast, the dance in wildest whirl, the wine feaming to the lip of the glasses. Midnight on earth is underson in hell. Demons held high carnival. The blucalcium light suggested the burning brimstone of the lost world. I give the rest of the morning to telling you how I felt. First of all, as at no deathbed or railroad disaster, d I feel an overwhelming sense of pity Why were we there as christian explorers ustead of participants? If these lost souls and had the same healthful surroundings and we had been placed amid contaminations, the ase would have been reversed. I wanted to get on this plat form, where, instead of saving one young man, I might save a thousand, and so the cry suppressed that night I let loose to day. bethought myself, looking on the scene, thes are the fragments of broken homes. A home from which they could never rise. And th ounds of the feet of the dancers grew fainte and fainter and stopped. And there was thick darkness. And I said, "What does all this mean?" And there came up a great hiss of whispering voices, saying "This is the second judgment!" I bethought myself, also, this is only a miserable copy of European dissipations. It is the ambition of bad peo-ole in this country to copy foreign vice. Foadyism, when it bows to foreign pretence equipage and title, is despicable is more loathsome when it bows foreign vice. As well steal th ow-cases of a small-pox hospital, or th hovels of a scavenger's cart, or the coffin of a leper, as to make their of these foreign plagues. Have at least some originality struction; have an American trap catch the bodies and souls of men instead infringing on the patented invention of European iniquity. Decent people have no idea what is going on. The foundations of New York and Brooklyn are struck through with rottenness. If iniquity advances in the next hundred years as in the past there will not be vestige of moral and religious influeneft. I wish that the next mayor of N York, whether he be Augustus Sch ward Cooper, may rise to the hight of h position. We are told that the twenty-five hundred police of New York cannot pudown the five or six hundred dens of iniqui to say nothing of the gambling houses and he unlicensed grog shops. I reply, "Swea me in as a special policeman-[laughter]-and give me two hundred police for tw nights, and I will break up all the leading haunts of iniquity in New York, and send such consternation into the smaller houses of sin that they will shut up of themselves." [Laughter and applause.] These abominations are to be charged either to police cowardice or to police complicity. Burglar wide awake! Libertinism wide awake! Mur der wide awake! The harvest of death for eternal wee! What is that?

Trinity clock striking—one, two!
"Good night," said the officers of the law, and we responded, "Good night." Was ever night forsaken, night awful! Fer many those we had been watching, everlastin night! So far as hell is from heaven was that night distant from being a good night. But, my friends, what are you going to do with this matter? Punish the people? That is not my theory; prevent the people? Cure the people? In nine hundred and ninety nine cases out of a thousand, it cannot be hinder the people, save the people before they go in. Next Sabbath morning I shall speak throw off the role of pulpit conventionality to plunge in after your drowning soil. I take your hand, hot with the feve of indulgences and trembling with las night's debauch, and give it a hearty shake You say, "You would not shake hands with me?" I would. Try me at the foot of this platform and see if I won't. On that the Atlantic and Pacific surges of divine forgive-ness may roar over your soul! As the sun of God's forgiveness rides on toward the mid-heavens, ready to submerge you in warmti and light, I bid you good morring, a morning of peace for all your troubles. In God' name, good morning. Heaven comes ve near to-day. It is only a stream that divide us—the narrow stream of death. And th voices there and the voices here seem to com mingle, and the united song of earth and heaven is Home, Sweet Home! Home f your domestic circle on earth! Home of fo giveness in that great heart of God! Hor f eternal rest in heaven! Home! Home

New York, in his latest letter, philosophically remarks: "The autumn trade is now in full activity, and business men are exerting every effort to improve the harvest. The Case of General Porter. Interview by Herald reporter with Genera Hancock: The conversation was again changed, the reporter asking General Han-cock's opinion of the Fitz John Porter case. "I think," he replied, "that the board of instigation could not have been better lected for determining the important ques-tions to be passed upon. Whatever may b their judgment it must satisfy all thoughtfu men; and if public opinion approves, doubtless it will, the result will be the estab ishment of a tribunal of appeal to pass or such cases after the heated feelings engendered by actual war have passed away. On articles of war were taken from those Great Britain, but in the latter there is, cases of great hardship, always a last appea to the sovereign, who is looked upon as the fountain of honor. In our case, unfortunately, the clause establishing the right of apsal was left out, but now, after a long time, restored to the army. Had the board been composed of officers of less experience and ability the result of their verdict would, probheir rulings will be taken as final and a stablishing a precedent that cannot be ignored. Of course I can give no opinion touching the merits of the case.

A $100,000 Decision at Knoxville. Kuoxville Tribune, Sunday: Among the lecisions of local interest in the suprem urt yesterday was that in the case of Kair s. Ross, by which the plaintiff is possesse of some valuable city property. The suit Joseph A. Mabry and wife rs. Mrs. S. Churchwell, involving real estate and other property, to the value of about one hundr ousand dollars, was also decided in fav of the plaintiffs, after fifteen years litigation The property includes a valuable farm conof the city; also, the Second creek ferry, i approaches, and the farm immediately sout of the river, besides a number of valuat town lots. This case, as stated, has been pending for years, and attracted general in terest from the amount involved.
